The amount of plunder secured by the robbers cannot yet be estimated, but it is thought to be considerable.

A Startling Story.

Two Hundred and Fifty People Killed in Mexico.

SOLDIERS FIGHTING A MOB.

A Mob of Ten Thousand People Quelled by Two Hundred Regular Troops After a Half Hour's Hard Fighting—The Streets of La Luz, Mexico, Filled With Blood.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., May 3.—A gentleman who has just arrived from Guanajuata, Mexico, brings details of a riot at that place. He is prominent in political life and the truth of his statement can be relied upon. He expects to return to Mexico shortly, and therefore his name is withheld.

Some two months ago, five jesuit priests who had been expelled from France for political reasons, appeared in La Luz, a mining suburb of Guanajuata. They immediately began a crusade against the Diaz government, preached of the wrongs of the priesthood, called for God's vengeance upon the impious heads which had allowed American railroads to penetrate the country and do much harm. They especially condemned civil law marriage proclaiming such unions illegal and children born of them illegitimate.

They were arrested but managed to escape; were recaptured and taken to jail. On their way to the jail they tore their hair, beat their breasts, and called upon the people to rescue them. It was nearly dark when they were imprisoned and soon there were 10,000 men surging about the jail. Many of them were armed, and in a short time they began the attack. Finally they fired the jail. At 11 o'clock, 200 regular soldiers appeared from Guanajuata. They came up at a double-quick and formed across the street. The mob refused to disperse at the officer's command and firing immediately began. The volleys mowed the crowd down at short range. Still the mob stood its ground. The streets were filled with blood. A number of the insurgents armed with pistols and rifles climbed upon the adjoining houses and the soldiers began to drop, one by one.

After a half hour's continuous fighting a charge with the bayonet was ordered. Then the mob gave way and ran pell-mell. Altogether more than 250 persons were dead upon the streets. The soldiers lost sixteen killed and wounded. Among the dead was one lieutenant. The fire in the jail was quenched and the frightened priests taken to Guanajuata for safety. They are now confined in the Castello de Grandelas, an immense pile in which the great Hidalgo revolution had its birth.

It is thought that had the riot proved successful and the local authority overthrown, a serious uprising would have resulted.

The Story Denied.

CITY OF MEXICO, May 3.—Governor Gonzales, of Guanajuata, telegraphs that there has been no bloodshed there. The priests in prison at La Luz will be tried in the courts like all other offenders. The utmost quiet prevails. President Diaz assured the Associated Press correspondent that quiet prevails in Guanajuata and all other states.

NEW YORK, May 3.—Mrs. Frank Leslie has received letters from Lord Ronald Gower, informing her of his purpose to present, through her, to some public gallery or collection in New York his collosal marble bust of "Our Savior," called "It Is Finished," now in the Royal academy of London. This work of art, which is now on its way to this city, will be accompanied by the plaster casts of the Shakespeare monument, in bronze, lately presented by Lord Roland Gower to the Stratford-on-Avon, and which he desires Mrs. Frank Leslie to tender to some "public collection of casts or a Shakespeare or artistic gallery."

Mrs Frank Leslie has not yet determined the ultimate disposition of the marble Christ, but it is probable that it will be transmitted either to the Metropolitan Museum of Art or to the St. Patrick's cathedral.

TWENTY-FIVE MILLION DOLLARS.

Five of the Largest Steel Plants in the World Consolidated.

CHICAGO, May 3.—There was filed with the secretary of state at Springfield yesterday by the North Chicago rolling-mills company amended articles of incorporation, increasing their capital stock from $6,000,000 to $25,000,000. The officers, directors and stockholders of the company were in session all the forenoon here, and none of them could be seen. This action at Springfield, however, indicates that the proposals for the consolidation of the three companies operating in this state have been ratified and the consolidation practically arranged. It is understood that the agreement provides for the consolidation of the North Chicago rolling-mills company and the Union steel company and the franchise outright by these two of the entire property of the Joliet steel company.

The new company will be known as the Illinois Steel company. When it gets into operation it will have entire control of five of the best plants in the country. Two of these are in Chicago, one in Milwaukee, one in South Chicago and one in Joliet, and it is believed that the consolidation will greatly facilitate the business and make it much more profitable by doing away with competition and utilizing the plant to the best advantage. It is claimed that all the works will continue to run full handed and that as many persons will be employed in connection with them as formerly.

The Miners' Strike.

Two Thousand Quit Work at Brazil, Indiana.

OTHERS TO DO LIKEWISE.

A Difference of Two and a Half Cents in the Scale of Wages Causes the Trouble. A Riot Among Italian Laborers in Pennsylvania—Other Labor Troubles.

BRAZIL, Ind., May 3.—The block coal miners of this district, 2,000 in number, quit work yesterday because of a disagreement with the operators over the yearly scale of wages. A secret delegate meeting was held here yesterday. It is known that the delegates entered the convention instructed to refuse the operators' offer, with the exception of the Nickel Plate, Chicago and Jumbo mines.

About one-third of the block miners of the district work in these mines, but the vote instructing the delegates was very small and rather evenly divided. It is generally understood among the miners that a strike is on. The operators offer seventy cents, but the miners have not yet committed themselves to any price. Of 1,000 bituminous coal miners less than one hundred are at work, though their differences is within two and a half cents of adjustment.

Riot Among Italians.

POTTSVILLE, Pa., May 3.—An outbreak occurred among a number of Italian laborers on the Schuylkill Valley railway near this city yesterday. The men struck for higher wages and arming themselves with pistols and clubs, compelled the men in other sections to join them. At the section of Contractor Reckert, near Orangeburg, the mob met with the first organized resistance, Reckert rallied his men and made a stand, some of his force being armed with Winchester rifles. Several volleys were fired, and the leader of the rioters, an Italian, was shot through the leg. The sheriff proceeded to the scene with a strong posse. Nine of the rioters were arrested and lodged in jail here last night. All is now quiet.

Before he could fire again another of the assailants shot him in the left arm. The negroes finally escaped to the works. Warrants have been issued for the arrest of the strikers.

CONVICTED.

Elmer Sharkey, Who Murdered His Aged Mother at Eaton, O., Found Guilty.

EATON, O., May 3.—The jury in the trial of Elmer Sharkey, charged with the murder of his aged mother, found the defendant guilty of murder in the first degree. The trial began April 22, and more than one hundred witnesses were examined. Intense interest was manifested in the case, there being a large number of ladies in attendance.

A strenuous effort was made by counsel for the defense to establish the theory of hereditary insanity, and to that end a number of experts were examined.

The state was represented by Judge J. W. King and ex-Prosecuting Attorney A. M. Crister, and the defendant by Messrs. Fisher and Marsh Brothers.

Following is a brief history of the crime: On the morning of Jan. 12, 1889, this community was startled by the report of an apparently cold-blooded murder, the victim being Mrs. Caroline Sharkey, a widow, residing on her 130 acre farm, some two and a half miles north of this city. Her only child, Elmer Sharkey, aged 22 years, was the sole occupant of the home residence with her.

The murder created great excitement, and before the coroner had the body removed from the position where found it had been viewed by many hundreds of our citizens. Near the dead body a ring maul was found, with marks of blood and hair from the victim's head upon it, which, with the crushed skull of the victim, indicated that this was the instrument with which the murder was committed.

Circumstances soon pointed to the son as the perpetrator of the dastardly act, though he had apparently made feeble efforts to divert suspicion from himself; but as the Coroner's investigation proceeded, he weakened, and, after the funeral of his mother, admitted his guilt.

The motive for the deed is found in the fact that he wanted to marry an estimable young lady of the neighborhood against the wishes of his mother, who strenuously objected, and threatened to disinherit him if he married in that way.

The stock market opened strong and active, and during the first half hour on buying by London commission houses prices advanced ¼ to 1½ per cent. Nearly all this advance was lost by 11 o'clock under a raid on the coal stocks and Union Pacific. In the hour to noon there was renewed buying and prices steadily advanced. At this writing the best figures are current and values are ¼ to 1 per cent. higher than those of Saturday.

CURRENT TOWN TOPICS

A Budget of Comment and Things by a New Correspondent.

We note in Thursday's STAR, under the head of "Curious Tastes," the following:

"The cingalese, after robbing the bee of its honey, eat it."

Now, we would like to have some fair minded citizen who desires to become a public benefactor rise and explain what there is that is curious in the taste of the cingalese in eating honey. Should they use the honey for hair pomade or pour it into a hole in the ground they might justly be accused of oddity.

⁂

We overheard the following on the street recently:

Mr. A.—What would be an appropriate name for the young lady that has refused many offers of marriage?

Mr. B.—Can't tell; give it up. Has it anything to do with the B. R. L.?

Mr. A.—"Ida Klun"—and Mr. B. fell dead.

⁂

In our perambulations we observed our genial friend, Dr. Wiant, shooting tatty English sparrows with a silent rifle. After an interesting study of the Doctor's mode of warfare, we were convinced that the sparrows had no cause for alarm, unless the doctor brought a gatling gun into service. Our friend, Carey, is a great card with a hook and line, but what he can't hit with a rifle would fill spheres.

⁂

We would mention the piano recital given at Music Hall on Thursday night were it not that elsewhere in this issue will be found an article on that subject by a gentleman that has had a life's experience in musical matters. His criticism is an able one and can be depended upon as treating the matter in a manner unattainable by us, who only know of music from the choice selections furnished us nightly by the S. A band.

⁂

The competitors for the street railway franchise are nearing the goal, both ordinances having reached their second reading, and from this time on the contest bids fair to be a warm one. A little earnest investigation at this point might result to the inestimable advantage of our citizens.

⁂

So we are to have twenty-nine new arc lights. They, with the present lights and the four to be furnished by the railroad companies will make Marion the best lighted town in Central Ohio. There is nothing slow about our city fathers, after all.

FIRE AND WATER

A Lady's Tragic Experience with the Conflicting Elements.

An accident, somewhat ludicrous to contemplate but rather serious to experience, happened a Mrs. Starling, at her home, about seven miles north of Marion, Thursday. While engaged in "making soap" in her door yard, her skirts brushed against the fire beneath the kettle and in instant her clothing was ablaze and she was soon entirely enveloped in flames. An open cistern was near, and the woman, in her desperation to prevent a painful scorching and possibly death, plunged into the chilling water. She succeeded in subduing the flames, but was now in a position from which she was unable to extricate herself. The water was not of sufficient depth to drown, and she utilized her voice to alarm the neighborhood. Her startling screams reached the scholars at a neighboring school house, who soon reached her and rescued her from the watery prison.

The lady was seriously burned, and the excitement sufficient to prostrate her, but the accident is not likely to terminate with fatal results.

The Sternberg Recital.

The piano recital by the great artist, Sternberg, at Music Hall Thursday evening, was given in the hearing of an audience of high social character and decided musical culture.

No more complete proof of Sternberg's success as a pianist of the highest rank can be afforded than the fact that expectation was not disappointed. Rather it was discovered that the "half had not been told." In listening to Sternberg for the first time one is liable to be confused and overpowered both by the immensity and the variety of his genius. His mastery of the instrument and of what are called the technical difficulties of playing mean far more than is commonly understood by the word. He performs upon the piano as if there were no difficulties to be overcome, as if the instrument were an obedient intelligence. He takes his rank like all other great artists, chiefly from his power of comprehending, assimilating and interpreting the thoughts of the great composers whose works he presents. This gift was a source of great delight to his listeners. "Were it not for music we might in these days say the beautiful were dead."

Miss Gertrude Smith gave great enjoyment by her singing. Her voice is as pleasing and captivating as one could wish, and is managed with great skill. It is particularly rich in powerful and sweet notes. Her interpretation of the Rect. and Aria, "St. Cecilia's Day," was exquisitely finished in style, and at once magnificent and rich in tone. Her second number "Burst Ye Apple Buds," was rendered in a soul stirring manner, giving the fair vocalist a high place in the admiration of her hearers. An enthusiastic encore was the result.

The accompanist, Miss Marion Hatter, performed her part with a marked degree of excellence. Both these young ladies reflect great credit upon the music school at Delaware.

Claridon-Adelaide.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Mitchell Sundayed in Fredericktown, the guests of Mr. and Mrs. James Durbin.

Mr. and Mrs. James Fletcher have requested the opportunity to express their high appreciation of the many favors bestowed upon them during the former's protracted illness.

The great medicine firm of Tonguet & Marshall collapsed on last Monday morning. Caused by a spasmodic eruption of the diaphragm on the part of the gentleman who did the talking. Am sorry to say that such things must and will take place. Things must be O. K. as they have engaged in different companies, Tonguet now meets the hearty demand of the people with O. N. T. and Marshall with "ambustible combominators," an instrument not surpassed in elegance and beauty in a household.

The photographic camera promises to be of even greater service in medicine than was imagined. It seems to have literally a superhuman faculty of diagnosis. Some time ago a photographer had as a subject a child apparently in good health, with a clear skin and good complexion. When the negative was examined, however, the picture showed the face to be covered with blotches. Within a week the child was covered with the eruption of measles. Another case is recorded when a child's portrait showed spots a fortnight before it was laid up with smallpox and before any trace of the disease had appeared. It would seem that the sensitive plate of the camera perceived and photographed the eruption before it was visible to the naked eye.—The Hospital.

Not Profanity.

Poseyboy—I am afraid I shall have to stop calling on you, Miss Travis.

Miss Travis—Why, pray?

Poseyboy—On account of your parrot. He is very profane.

Miss Travis—That isn't profanity, you goose. I am simply teaching him the names of the latest German operas.—Burlington Free Press.

One or the Other.

Lives of cowboys all remind us
If on earth we wish to stop,
We should leave them far behind us,
Or arrange to get the drop.
—Washington Post.

A Perfect Automaton.

"This automatic dude is a great success."

"I can't agree with you. It has been wound up, but it don't go."

"I know that, my dear; that's why it is such a great success. Did you ever see a real dude that would work?"—Harper's Bazar.

Officers Re-elected.

AUSTIN, May 3.—At a meeting of the [illegible] directors of the Mexican Central railroad yesterday the old officers were re-elected for the ensuing year.

DAUGHTERS OF EVE.

Queen Victoria is exceedingly fond of tapioca pudding.

Mrs. Shaw's fame is threatened by a German whistler, Miss Ethel Grigs.

The Queen of Roumania has just completed a drama, which she has read aloud before a small circle of friends.

The "woman with the iron jaw," of circus fame, is a resident of Ridgway, Pa. She has traveled nearly all over the world.

Mrs. Elizabeth Stuart Phelps Ward is visiting her old home at Andover. Her health has been entirely restored by her winter at the south.

At the examinations in descriptive and practical anatomy held by the Irish Royal College of Surgeons, two lady students have taken the highest prizes.

Fifty years ago the Turkish woman who could read was everlastingly disgraced. Now the sultan himself has just established two schools for girls at Constantinople.

Shige Kusida, a young Japanese woman, who has been doing successful temperance work among her own people, is to be sent to the United States to study the methods.

Helen Chalmers, daughter of the noted Dr. Chalmers, lives now in one of the worst of Edinburgh's slums, and goes about doing good to its inhabitants all times of day and night.

Octave Thanet, otherwise Miss Alice French, is a marvel of literary industry. She writes sometimes ten hours at a stretch in a small, fine clear hand, with the i's all dotted and the t's all crossed.

Here are some stage waists: Ellen Terry, 28 inches; Mary Anderson, 26; Mrs. Bernard Beere, 27; Dorothy Dene, 24; Mary Rorke, 23; Kate Vaughan, 21½; Miss Norreys, 22, and Grace Hawthorne, 29.

New York is to have a new club of women called the "Dorothy." Its object is to provide a comfortable and convenient home for the exclusive accommodation of ladies coming into the city unattended.

Mr. Hicks, of Oshkosh, Wis., the new American minister to Peru, will take along with him as private secretary a typewriting young woman of the newspaper variety, Miss Elizabeth Eleanor Banks, of St. Paul, Minn.

Janet Hamilton, the Scotch poetess to whose memory Mr. Gladstone has just helped erect a fountain in her native Langloan, was in youth wholly uneducated, was married at 13 and was more than 60 when her first volume of poems was given to the world.

Mrs. Mead, of California, prefers plowing to housework, so last fall she hired a girl to drudge indoors and herself took charge of a four horse plow. Between her and Mr. Mead they put in 200 acres of wheat, and are mutually delighted with the experiment.

Maria, Marchioness of Ailesbury, who has just celebrated her 78th birthday, married the first marquis as his second wife in 1833, and is the first of an almost, if not quite, unique trio in the peerage of widows, as the widows of the second and third holders of the title are still living.

Mrs. Astor and Mrs. Vanderbilt wear silks especially designed and woven for them. Where they buy their things is never divulged by dealers, and the fashion of their gowns is profoundly guarded by their dressmakers from the knowledge of other women. So writes a New York correspondent.

Empress Augusta-Victoria of Germany does not think it unbecoming to her dignity to personally superintend her nursery, and she occasionally persuades the emperor to pass half an hour alone with herself and the royal children, and on such occasions dismisses everybody else from the chamber.

The Mississippi girl so exploited by the newspapers, who bought calico and made a bonnet with the five cents given her for a birthday present, is likely to die a millionaire. She sold the bonnet, as related, for forty cents, and kept turning her capital over till it amounted to $40. This she put into a cow, whose milk she sold for $20, besides raising a calf worth as much, so now she has $60 worth of cattle and $20 cash as the result of a small beginning.

CURIOUS THINGS OF LIFE.

A Philadelphia connoisseur in eating says that muskrat meat tastes better than any sirloin.

One result of the collapse of the "boom" at Los Angeles is that there are 400 applications for positions on the police force.

A Georgia exchange says that Hon. H. W. J. Ham, Sam Veal and Major R. A. Bacon met recently by accident in a store at Rome.

The Wellington, Kan., elite held a hemming social recently, at which the young men doing the best work received a gold pen and holder.

The prejudice against horse flesh has now so faded out in Paris that there are 132 recognized butcher shops where horse flesh is openly sold.

A Buena Vista, Ga., hen lays eggs which are covered with longitudinal ridges and resemble muskmelons. This story, as well as the eggs, is to be taken with a little salt.

In Kingston harbor the other day a shark was captured, and on examination his stomach was found to contain two straw hats, a cow's head, two hoofs and three horns, a large kerosene can, a basket and some sardine tins.

A ringtailed raccoon kept by a Lansing, Mich., man as a pet, broke loose the other night and ate up a wedding cake, sampled the rest of the wedding feast, and made the bride so mad that she almost postponed the wedding.

The other night in Atlanta, Ga., a drunken man was driving a blind horse, and they both fell, not into a ditch, but into a sewer six feet deep. The entire outfit was fished out uninjured, and the drunken man drove on his way rejoicing.

Joe Wilson, an Alabama river fisherman colored, caught a huge catfish and started home with it. Somewhere on the way the fish flopped its tail against the hammer of Wilson's gun. The piece was discharged, sending a load of duck shot through the negro's thigh, inflicting a very dangerous wound.

A coal dealer in Yorkshire, Eng., has been in the habit of giving overweight in selling, the weighing machine being so constructed as to register about 2,400 pounds as a ton. He did this out of pure benevolence. But strangely enough his kindness was declared to be illegal by the authorities, who arrested and fined him for falsifying an official weight.

An Akron painter was at work on a business block when he discovered a last year's bird's nest in a niche in the ornamental wood work. There was nothing attractive or particularly interesting in the make up of this nest as the painter glanced at it, but he thoughtlessly picked it up and began to tear it apart. Among the odds and ends he beheld a $10 bill.

The ups and downs of mining life are well illustrated by the career of Jean Duvoll, a well known character of Sonora, Cal. In 1884 he made over a million dollars by a lucky mining speculation. Duvoll then went to San Francisco and invested in stocks. Today he is penniless.

'Twas Ever Thus.

A gallant oyster loved a sponge
In the depths of the dark blue sea,
And the sponge which the gallant oyster loved
Was as fair as a sponge could be.

But the sponge this oyster's love disdained,
With a manner most cold and curt;
To feel that his love by a sponge was spurned
Did the pride of the oyster hurt.

Fate came at last, the sponge caught cold,
And she died of membr'ous croup;
While the gallant oyster who loved the sponge
Found he was in the soup!

LONG LIFE

There is nothing in the world more generally desired than long life, yet the majority of people put off caring for their health—not because they are really careless, but because we live our lives at such a pace we have not time to give the subject sufficient thought until we receive a reminder in the shape of a severe illness.

Then, too, we are constantly bewildered by the various schools of medicine, and the physicians who represent them, and often blunder in our choice of a doctor.

If people only knew that the very best health-keeper, life-preserver, and disease-preventer that has ever been discovered, is simmered down into a concentrated and very palatable form in the shape of New Style Pleasant Taste Vinegar Bitters, they would not hesitate a moment to try it.

But they do not know. How can they know, when so many not only worthless, but positively injurious drugs are constantly flooding the market under various names guises, that the New Style Vinegar Bitters is as bad as any of them? They do not know, of course, unless they have the courage to try the New Style. It straightens out a tangled-up system in a very short while, and those who buy it once buy it always.

Why don't you try it, reader? It is sent out by a responsible house, and is exactly as represented. It costs but a dollar for a very large bottle. Try it once and you will never be so glad of anything in your life. Your druggist may not have it, but he will order it for you. Be sure it says New Style Pleasant Taste on carton and bottle before you take it. Try it, and you will feel happier than if you had found a gold mine, for it really is a mine—of health.

TOSSED ON THE WAVES.

JAPANESE JUNKS CAST AWAY IN THE PACIFIC OCEAN.

Hardships Endured by Oriental Sailors Under the Old Methods—Two Thousand Miles Out Without Mast or Rudder—Forty Beans to Each Man Per Day.

On the morning of the 9th of January, 1877, the City of Peking, on her outward trip, sighted what at first appeared to be an abandoned vessel adrift at sea. The steamer bore away for her, when it was seen that she was a Japanese junk with one mast gone. An officer and boat's crew were sent off, who found that the junk belonged to Ha-Rodadi; that she was partly loaded with rice and saki (Japanese whisky), and besides the skipper and supercargo had a crew of five men. On the 1st of December preceding the junk, which, by the way, rejoiced in the name of the Hisayoshimam, had been driven out to sea, and things having got badly mixed up in an unusually terrific blast it was found to be the easiest way of lowering sails to chop the mast down. Then a heavy sea carried away the rudder and stove in the bulwarks, after which the junk drifted and sloshed around in the old and unoriginal way of "at the mercy of the winds and waves."

THEY STUCK TO THE SAKI.

Captain and crew had become so completely disheartened on the waste of waters, or so unduly jolly on a waste of saki, that when boarded by the officer of the steamer they didn't know the day of the week or the month, hardly knew where they had come from, and certainly didn't know where they were going to. They were informed that they were something like 2,000 miles distant from Japan, but despite this warning intelligence, only four of the crew would leave the junk—the captain, supercargo and the fifth man declaring their intention of sticking to the junk so long as the rice and saki held out.

The Coos Bay News, published at Marshfield, Ore., in its issue of July 17, 1878, had the following report from the captain of the schooner Parallel, which arrived at that port July 15 from San Francisco:

"The schooner Parallel on the 7th inst., in latitude 39 deg. 42 min., longitude 130 deg. 26 min., at 4 a. m., sighted a Japanese junk adrift. A boat was lowered and the strange vessel boarded, when a terrible sight met the boarders. Not a living soul was aboard, but three corpses of Japanese who had probably been dead at least a month. Two of the bodies had been shackled together, doubtless having been crazed for want of food or water and fastened up by their comrades. Two of these bound bodies were lying amidships with their knees bound together with cords upon their breasts, their arms were drawn over their heads and securely tied and cords were bound around their necks; in short, they were completely inclosed in a netting formed by the lacing and interlacing of cords. The sunken eyes and shriveled condition of the bodies were frightful to look at. The other corpse was found forward, stripped to the waist, and gave indications of the terrible sufferings that the man must have endured previous to his death. From the numerous fireplaces and mats found between decks it was evident that the vessel had been manned by a large crew. Upon examination considerable water was found in the hold, but no evidence of her having had a cargo on board could be discovered. The only article of food that was found was a portion of a chest of tea, covered with mold. In the cabin were several handsome pieces of furniture.

"The two bound bodies were well dressed, and a lot of fine silk ladies' wearing apparel was brought off the wreck by the sailors. The stench of decaying bodies was such as to prevent a thorough inspection. The hull of the junk was in good condition, and when last seen was drifting to the south and east and bearing with it, perhaps, a mystery of the Oriental seas."

PROBABLY THE LATEST CASE.

When the steamship City of Peking arrived at San Francisco from Japan, June 12, 1881, one of the passengers related the following story to a Chronicle reporter: The tenth day out from Yokohama the steamer came across a dismantled, helpless Japanese junk, which had been driven off from the entrance to the bay of Yeddo during a typhoon that had occurred on the 9th of December, or ten months previous to their rescue. They had lost their masts and rudder and had been drifting at the mercy of the winds they knew not where. After their own provisions were exhausted they had subsisted on their cargo, mostly beans and dried fish, and on such rain water as they could catch. They had burned most of the small woodwork, doors, berths, windows, etc., of their junk for fuel, and were on short food rations, forty beans per day for each man being the allowance. Their fire, when put out from time to time, they had rekindled by rubbing two pieces of wood together. One of their number had died from exhaustion and they had given up all hope of ever seeing land or anything human again when they sighted the City of Peking. They were taken on board the steamer, a concert was given in their aid, and on the next trip of the City of Peking they were taken back to their own country.

So little by little the long record of disasters has been gradually abridged, if not wholly terminated. Japan has now not only a navy, but an excellent fleet of coasting steamers and well built sailing craft of modern construction. Before her awakening Japan drove away the rescued junk men from her coast as though they had the plague; now she rewards the rescuers.—San Francisco Chronicle.

London's Disabled Horses.

Mr. W. H. Ross, secretary to Harrison & Barber, horse slaughterers, told to a Pall Mall Gazette reporter the other day that they have seven slaughter houses in the metropolitan area, the largest being that in the York road, Camden town. They slaughtered 25,000 horses a year. When a horse broke a limb or sustained other irremediable injury on the street the police at once communicated with their nearest depot. The company had frequently been charged with cruelty in allowing maimed horses to lie about for hours before sending men to end their sufferings. The truth was they were very particular in this respect, and if such delays occurred it was through no fault of theirs. Was horseflesh much used for food? Yes, to a considerable extent, he should say.

Their charter did not allow of their selling horseflesh for food purposes, but there were such establishments in the city. He had himself eaten horsemeat in France, and at the company's annual dinner it was served to the guests, some of whom declared they would not have known it from beef, had they not been told. Fine fat horses were slaughtered every week, horses that were perfectly sound, except for some accidental injury, and he saw no reason why this flesh should not be eaten. He had often seen street gamins buy a slice of dried horseflesh, place it between two bits of bread, and eat it as a sandwich! Of course, most of the prepared horseflesh passed under the name of catsmeat, but it seemed incredible that the cats could consume it all.

Every part of the horse was put to some use—flesh, hide, hair, hoofs and bones. Now that (and Mr. Ross held up a small vial of beautifully transparent oil) was horse oil. One would scarcely think such oil as that could be got from the horse. Those other bottles contain oils of inferior quality. They were used for lubricating purposes and for soap making. Most soaps nowadays contained horse grease.

Armed with a cigar and an order from the secretary of the company, our reporter made his way to the premises in York road. The obliging manager said they had had only four horses in today. But about 7,800 were slaughtered here annually. Most of the animals were cab, 'bus or tram horses. The establishment turned out about twenty tons of horseflesh every week. They had forty-six dead and twenty-one live horses in now. They contracted with the various cab, 'bus and tram companies for injured horses at 30 shillings each, alive or dead. Most of the live horses they got in were injured internally by overwork or falling. A few were gone with congestion of the lungs. The work of slaughtering went on day and night, there being two gangs of men for that purpose. Horses were killed at night by three "knackers." Fifteen horses were considered a good night's work. The sufferings of the poor brutes were soon at an end, as they were rendered insensible by a blow from a heavy ax.—Pall Mall Gazette.

A Prophetic Dream.

Some days before the late disaster at Samoa the wife of an officer at Mare Island awoke from her first sleep, trembling and in tears, and related to her husband a fearful dream experience. She thought she had been in her dream transported to the island of Samoa, and from the shores of the harbor of Apia looked upon the American and German fleets. Suddenly a storm arose, and the harbor was swept by a fierce tornado. Ship after ship went ashore, and the spectators united in offering up prayers for the preservation of the remaining vessels. Lastly the Vandalia and Trenton dragged their anchors, and, as the former vessel was dashed upon the reef and almost immediately sank, Mrs. —— witnessed the death of Capt. Schoonmaker, Lieut. Sutton and Paymaster Armes, the three officers who were the victims of the actual disaster of March 16.

The picture was so vivid and real that Mrs. —— for days was nervous and agitated, thinking only of her dream, and relating it to others, always insisting that the vessels and friends so recently gone from Mare Island must certainly be exposed to some fearful peril, and when the fictitious story of the sinking of the Nipsic reached us she concluded this to be the interpretation of her dream. The falsity of this story being proved, Mrs. —— was, of course, disposed to make light of her vision; but now comes a tale of disaster infinitely more sad than the fiction which agitated our country for so many days—an event corresponding most closely with this apparently prophetic dream.

In this story—capable of perfect authentication—we have a good record for the archives of the psychical seventy.—Vallejo Times.

A Ship in a Cyclone.

What a Samoan hurricane is like and what chance a ship has while at its mercy, may be imagined after reading Abercromby's "Seas and Skies in Many Latitudes." He says:

"Much has been written about handling ships in hurricanes and elaborate maneuvers have been described which they are to perform near the center of a typhoon. Many a ship has been saved by skillful sailing on the outskirts of a cyclone, and even after the characteristic squalls and driving rain have begun. But when near the center she gets in the kernel, as it were, of the hurricane, and the wind comes in great gusts which no canvas can withstand, when the roaring of the wind is so tremendous that no voice can be heard, when the sky and cloud and spindrift are mixed up indistinguishably from one another in a general darkness, then it is as impossible to give an order as to obey it, and the sailor can only hope that her timbers may not open so as to spring a leak, and that her steering gear may hold so that she may not broach to and be overwhelmed by the waves."—New York Telegram.

SEC. 6. Each representative district, in counties entitled to more than one representative, shall be composed of compact territory, bounded by ward or township lines, and as nearly equal in population as practicable; and each of such districts shall be numbered.

SEC. 7. The state shall be divided into not less than thirty-five nor more than forty senatorial districts, as herein provided, and each district shall choose one senator.

SEC. 8. The ratio for a senator shall be ascertained by dividing the population of the state by the number "thirty-five."

SEC. 9. Each senatorial district shall be composed of compact territory, as nearly equal in population as practicable, and except as to districts in counties entitled to two or more senators, shall be bounded by county lines.

SEC. 10. Each county having a population equal to three-fourths of one senatorial ratio shall constitute a senatorial district. Each county having a population equal to one senatorial ratio, and one-half over, shall be divided into two senatorial districts. Each county having a population equal to two and one-half ratios shall be divided into three senatorial districts, and so on; but no ward or township shall be divided in the formation of a senatorial district.

SEC. 11. The apportionment so made for members of the General Assembly shall be reported to the Governor, by such commission, within three months after their appointment, and the same shall be published in such manner as shall be provided by law.

SECTION 2. At such election those electors desiring to vote for such amendment shall have placed upon their ballots the words "Legislative Single Districts—Yes," and those opposed to such amendment shall have placed upon their ballots the words "Legislative Single Districts—No."

—J. N. wishes all the press of Marion to hear an equal share of the mysterious veil before he asks the people to hear him. —A story is going the rounds of a certain butcher of the city who went out into the country to buy a calf. After reaching the residence of the gentleman who owned the object of his errand he hitched his horses and went in, where he was pleasantly entertained for some time with fine cider and wine. In the meantime his horses broke away from their fastenings and ran away. Upon coming out of the house and finding them gone he immediately started in pursuit but after going some distance he became tired from the beverages he had indulged in and sat down to rest and went to sleep. After he had been gone quite a length of time his friends gave the alarm that he was lost and started in search of him, but were unable to find the slightest trace of him, although they continued the search through the greater part of the night. The next day a little before noon the lost butcher showed up and announced that he had spent the night in a fence corner.
